THE course of the Radicals in Arkansas and Louisiana since the election, prove that their party is past penitence, or the possibility of redemption. Senator Dorsey's cry of Ku-Klux in Arkansas is the very weakness of inanity. The voice of the North was clear and emphatic on Nov. 3, that it could not be diverted from its purpose of political reformation by any fresh hellabilloo about White Leaguers, Southern disloyalty, or oppression of negroes. The simple fact is, the Northern people want the cotton and sugar as before the war, so rottenness had a spark of vitality left, the first act of Congress next month | This evening the strikers became riotons would be to right Louisiana's wrongs, and attacked the agent of the Pacific Mail and set its seal of reprobation on Clayton, Dorsey, and such like.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE FOURTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT. The death of the Hon. John W. Head, who was recently elected to Congress from this district, has made it necessary for the Governor to order another election to fill the vacancy thus occurring. I am a can-didate for that position, and I call upon my personal and political friends, throughout the district, to give me their support. I am in sentiment in full accord with the principles of the Democratic and Conservative party, which have so recently, in Tennessee, received the emphatic approval of her people, and I am, upon principle, and from motives of honest patriotism, opposed to the usurpation and corruption of the Republican party. And whether in public or private station I shall strive, by the of all honorable means, to establish the dominion of the first and overthrow that of the other. The Governor has fixed the day of elec-ties as I can within that period, and at upon the political questions of the hour.

I am a native of Smith, one of the counties of the district, and have spent all the days of my manhood in Wilson, another county of the district. > FAYETTEVILLE, TENN., Nov. 15 .- Hon Horace Maynard, Knoxville, Tenu.-Dear Horace: A vacancy has occured in the postoffice department down here on the Winchester and Alabama railroad. It was occasioned altogether by some little indiscretions on the part of the young rout agent, who simply appropriated, at different times, small amounts of the currency ot our great government, that were intend ed for various individuals, and he has been transferred from the postoffice department to apartments at Nashville, to await an in-

Now don't get fretted and ask what the mischief I am telling you all this for, Wily, (they call you Wily down here sometimes -Willy Narrow Gansett, you know, but never did much believe that was you name), but just wait till I get to the point and I'm narrowing down to it right now. You see, my countryman, (you are my countryman, aint you, if you did come from New England?) I want that sit. Now some of these young bucks who are getting up petitions, signed by dead oodles of business men, etc., may tell you that they are the election of Emerson because he was a troofy loil, and can swallow Civil Rights foreigner, and the Liberals against the bill, black bills or any other bill, (and I choice of Disraeli because of the undue influence in his favor by the professors of the would swallow up more greenback bills than the young man who is now about to be interviewed by Judge Trigg.) but you just keep your snaky eye skinned on them fellows, Narrow; they ain't haif as loyal as I am right now.

> You understand, Mr. Gansett, four years tramping through the Southern Confederacy (so-called,) during the unpleasantness some time back, took all the unloyalty out of me. You remember the time; though I don't believe you were there, any way we didn't happen to meet, or, if we did, we didn't re cognize each other. I think I ought to have this place, for I never held but one office under the government in my life, and that was when I was a small boy—I carried the mail once from here to Shelbyville -a very loyal place you know, Wily, and that gave me a little experience in the business. And another thing in this connection I'll mention: I did'nt steal narry a dollar from the department. You see I was too young, and besides, I didn't have a

They never had a chance to show their un-

Now, I know you are a man who takes a broad view of things, if your middle name is Narrow, and you can look over that boyish trick of mine-trying to break up the best government the world ever saw-and agree to throw out a potoon across the dirty ditch, especially, Narrow, when you reflect that from the way these election have been going lately, it begins to look like we Democrats will have something to say about the arrangement of the pont ourselves. But we ain't going to be hard on you fellows, Wily, when we get into power; and suppose you and I just set the people of both parties an example of conciliatorytiveness, you by having me appointed to this place, and I by dignificily accepting it. Don't you see the broad point, Narrow? Or is it too thin? What do you say, my countryman? Come up to the scratch like a man, Wily, and let's set an example to both parties that will astonish the world and be the first step towards a thorough and complete reconstruction. Understand, though, I am already reconstructed myself and don't care a darn for the late misun derstanding. But I want this posish-want it badly; in fact, I'm like the fellow who wanted to be elected militia captain I'm a poor man and need the office; its a

A CURIOUS case of mistaken identity happened at Fanenil Hall, Boston, the other evening while the Democrats were holdwhen a man who was taken for Butler by everybody walked upon the stage and sat down, smiling, meanwhile, with as much radiance as anybody. The audience were taken aback, and as soon as they could recover their senses they began to hiss, but Mr. John S. Holmes immediately stepped forward and shouted, "I am no Ben Butler," and the crowd was satisfied.
